To her daughter Elizabeth, Mrs. Gardiner Greene of Boston.

[London ?] Answers her inquiries in regard to the painting of "Charles the First". Informs her that it is in the house at George Street; that it had been on exhibition and was much talked of. It was thought that the King would buy it, but nothing had come of it. Can see no reason why it should not be sold and sets the price at 1,500 guineas. A.L.S. 1p. 9 x 7 1/4 in.

To Maria Weston

‹London› The writer says that Mrs. Bates derives great pleasure out of the addressee's letters and that the drawing she has sent has been much praised. It appears to the writer that he has signed 500 letters this day. Sends love to the Weymouth friends. Has no doubt that the addressee's mother will go on with her good deeds. If money is wanting for her or her children's comfort, they are to draw on him. Mentions a problematical case for possible charity and offers to "advance a little cash." "...I must enjoin secrecy in all these givings," and letters on the subject should be sent to the cover-address of Williams, [illegible] care of Mssrs. Baring Brothers Co. "I have a sort o[illegible]ad of having it known I give money." Is working"like a coach horse."

«London» Is pleased by the spread of Abolition sentiment in the U.S., but is "depressed at the state of the Anti-Slavery cause here." India, Africa and the Colonies are suffering from Slavery and the Slave Trade, but have no Anti-Slavery representatives in Parliament. "... our statesmen ... are mere party men," who "will sacrifice the noblest principles ... to political expediency." Mentions addresses to Queen Victoria in behalf of apprentice laborers in the colonies submitted by women in England, Ireland and Scotland. Wants a copy of the Liberator sent to 18 Aldermanbury. The problem of the annexation of Texas is becoming better understood in England. The writer i[illegible]osed to it on humanitarian grounds.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman and others

«London» A letter about the Phillips' trip to London in the summer of 1839. Wendell Phillips couldn't go to Scotland, even at G. Thompson's urgent request. The writer describes an interview with Thompson, Elizabeth Pease, and tells about the articles they were sending to the Anti-Slavery fair. Thompson thought England's cotton could be obtained from India, and not from American slaveholders. E. Pease asked many questions about the Grimkés. Writer looked for presents of clothing for the addressee and her children, but could find nothing. Tells about a visit from Mrs. «Joshua» Bates. This letter contains much dialog[illegible]

To William Lloyd Garrison

[2 Christopher St., Finsbury, London] Asks for a return of a certain letter. Refers to a possible answer to this letter. Had an argument with Martha V. Ball. Thanks W.L.G. for a farewell letter. Hopes to hear that he is enjoying "the free & genial atmosphere of Scotland." Says that "every day tells of friends gone over to 'New Organization'..." Assures W.L.G. of her continued support. In a letter to E. (P.) N.'s father T. Clarkson inquires about the current status of the Coloniz-ation Society. E. (P.) N. wants to know is it has injured the Anti-Slavery cause in America.

To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

[London.] The writer is homesick, having met with discouragement from almost every quarter. "Even R.R. Gurley of colonization memory can gain a hearing among abolitionists, who treat me with comparative contempt." Describes his voyage on the British Queen. Has called on John Bowring, William H. Ashhurst, and Professor (William) Adam. On the road to Edinburgh, the writer visited the Peases; Elizabeth Pease was like an oasis in the desert. Also visited Harriet Martineau. George Thompson was almost the only one who gave the writer encouragement, but H.B. Stanton, J.G. Birney and John Scoble were scheming to cripple Thompson's influence in Edinbu[illegible] and Charles Stuart was travelling "to sift in New Org[illegible]tion." A rumor had been circulated that Garrison was a Socinian and "in that place nothing... could have murdered his influence more than this." The writer reports on meetings of committees of the men's and women's (Edinburgh) societies, where Stuart, representing the opposition, and Thompson, Charles L. Remond and the writer discussed old and new organization. The women, prejudiced by the men, were "horrified" when the writer exposed the treachery of the new organisers. The writer analyzes the character of George Thompson, whom he considers a "creature of circumstances." After another committee meeting at which Stuart and the writer spoke, the latter f[illegible]d a change: "a good state of feeling was produced." Recomm[illegible] Mrs. Harriet Gairdener as a valuable correspondent. In Lon[illegible] the writer is negotiating with Thomas Fowell Buxton and the Duchess of Sutherland.

«London.» The writer disclaims sacrifices for the cause on her part, and any loss of the good opinion of her friends has been compensated by friendship with "some of the choicest spirits" in America. John A. Collins has been "passing through a fiery trial." The writer feels "a sister's love" for Wendell and Ann Phillips. Tells about the attitude of the London Committee: "John Scoble intimated that they had ample evidence to prove all «Nathaniel» Colver said." The British India Society have consented to let George Thompson work for the Anti-Corn Law League. Referring to the addressee's disappointment in Thompson's star[illegible] the (World?) Convention, the writer tells that he "acted [illegible]y" before the Edinburgh com-

.London. The writer repeats her sister Ria's remark on Americans appearing to be " n complete bondage to each other high & low nothing but panic dread of what this & that may say of them..." Elizabeth Pease is condemned for a while to her couch. The writer advocates the idea of women's helping men make better laws; "will you not aid us in the struggle of might against right?" Fears that "our corn-law blaze at Manchester" will be a disappointment, as little impression seems to be made on "the house with 121 tory majority."

New Kent Road (London?). Acknowledges receipt of Liberty Bell; has enjoyed the picture of Hayti, but wishes that land's happily emancipated people "were blessed with the more full and glorious liberty of the Gospel" (i.e. Protestantism). Mrs. Elizabeth Fry has been out of town and out of health. The writer summarizes a letter received from the daughter-in-law of Mrs. Fry expressing the latter's views. Mrs. Fry finds it difficult to write to Mrs. Chapman because she "does not feel clear in her mind about the Boston Anti-Slavery Society." The writer explains that the misrepresentation "that it is not an Anti-Slavery Society only... [illegible]t one mixed up with other & debatable points... has taken [illegible]irm a hold on the minds of many..." The writer herself [illegible]ors adhering to anti-slavery only and leaving all other questions, such as women's rights.

«Northfleet House, (London?)» The writer wishes that all Abolitionists would abstain from "speaking against any part of holy scriptures ..." Praises F. Douglass. Gives arguments against buying slaves out of bondage. Tells about debt-ridden planters in the West Indies freeing their slaves. Has been helping the Irish, and describes the misfortunes of families she knows.

‹The Elms, Clapton, (Eng.)› The People's Journal, on which the writer was engaged, tried to create a stronger bond of goodwill between England and America. The editor and one Phelps(?) "have gained the ear of our dear friend William Lloyd Garrison." Garrison "proposed the scheme of the International testimony against slavery" to William Lovett. Phelps and the editor are pushing the idea prematurely. Mentions the founding of Howitt's Journal. Wants a memoir of Abby Kelley. Expects the People's Journal to go bankrupt. Says Lovett is the proper person to handle "the International Testimony against Slavery."

«Clapton, (London)» Thanks the addressee for her kind letter Refers to a "bitterly unkind" article in the National Anti-Slavery Standard."That article brought with it sleepless nights & cost me tears." Although the article was written by a Mr. Briggs, the author of Harry Franco, the writer imagines that "the animus of that article proceeds from this country-from the malicious, bad people in the Peoples' Journal, who are doing all they can to ruin us entirely." Mentions especially a John Dix, known in America by the name of John Dix Ross, "an unfortunate drunkard & thief but who is allied with Mr. (John) Saunders against [illegible] & who has attempted to cast a stigma on my character res[illegible]ng an article on Lowell which

The writer also cannot see why the Ellis article was treated as a pro-Slavery article, nor why the acting Editor designated Rev. Ellis as a "hater of God and Man." To "Dear Madam" «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«29 Charlotte Terrace, Barnsbury Road, Islington, (London)» The writer tells about George Thompson, who "passed through his first ordeal with his constituency successfully." There was, however, a strong opposition, which resulted in a hostile amendment to the resolution approving of Thompson's proceedings and pledging future support. Thompson made a short, extemporaneous speech, "but one of the most manly eloquent and effective I ever heard him deliver." The writer summarizes the speech, which included accounts of Thompson's visits to America in 1835 and 1850. "The audience nearly 3,000 in number were almost mad with [illegible]usiasm. Not a single hand ... was held up for the amendme[illegible]nd the original motion was carried with only one dissentient."

[29 Soho Sq., (London)] The writer dined yesterday at Mr. Conder's, editor of the Patriot. He has "a very poor opinion of [John] Scoble as regards truth" and has broken with him. Mr.Conder spoke of Garrison as an infidel and "a man of very bad moral character." He was, however, glad to hear "an opposite testimony of Garrison." Refers to the (London) Morning Advertiser and the articles of Mr. (James) Grant. Praises Dr. (Stephen) Lushington. Discusses opportunities for publishing in the newspapers. .(London?). Sends a number of the Patriot. Comments on the (published) letters of Lewis Tappan. "Like Gladstone's letters to Lord Aberdeen their power is coming from Tappan rather than from a more decided or energetic Abolitionist." The writer called at the Morning Advertiser office to get (James) Grant to insert the letters, but did not find him in. "Had this testimony been borne by Garrison or in fact any of his party it wd not tell as does Tappan's." Comments on Dr. Estlin's generosity, and on the "infamy of the American ministers." To her sister Elizabeth, Mrs. Gardiner Greene.

[London, England.] Has been awaiting news from America. Is glad to say that Georgie is recovering from her illness and hopes that Sarah has also recovered her health. Relates the surprise which they felt at the resignation of the Russell cabinet. Lord Derby tried to persuade Lyndhurst to be a member of the cabinet and to accept an earldom, but he felt that it would be unwise for him to do so. Plan to go to Turville on the next day. To «Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman»

«3 Holler Place, Fulham Road, Brompton» This letter is concerned with the addresee's attitude toward Mme D'Agout. Apparently the writer had brought the addressee, who wished to know women interested in the anti-slavery cause, into some connection with Mme D'Agout, "a distinguished writer, a historian." It appears, however, that the addressee, because of moral scruples, did not wish to cooperate with Mme D'Agout. The writer thinks it wrong of the addressee to take a censorious view of this lady, who preferred to leave her husband rather than deceive him. This may be a crime in the eyes of the world, which usually acts differently, but that it should «Upper Clapton, (England)» Is greatly pleased with the addressee's "Address to the Ministers." The writer read in the A.S. Standard a letter by Albert Barnes "proving that he and other Antislavery Ministers did more good by remaining in connection with the Church than by coming out of it." To her astonishment, the writer found that her letter to Kossuth was in the paper "and what was far worse my name was given as the writer of it." Desires a few shillings worth of the Moral Map, which the writer has already sent as far as Calcutta.

The writer's special mission is "to keep Mr. (James) Grant up to the mark & in good humor with correct A.S. people: which includes keeping him, as much as possible, at variance with the Scobelite party!" Scoble complained because Mr. Grant did not send him E. Mathews's letters for examination before admitting them to the Morning Advertiser. (Josiah?) Henson complained that the Morning Advertiser articles had "stopped his supplies." Mr. Grant sees "into what difficulties his schemes about the Dawn Institute" have brought Scoble. E. who was writing a history of "the crime of December." The writer extols E.Mathews, who is doing the cause, and even the American A.S. Society "more good than Mr.Wendell Phillips could at this moment." The real cause of hostility to the Garrison party does not arise from religious opinions, but from fear of disturbance in the American & English sects. Tomorrow the writer is going to see the Crafts. Hopes they will continue at the school. "Miss Lushington said Lady Byrons will contribute for the ensuing schooling." Mrs.Follen has been in poor health. To Anne Warren Weston

«London» The writer tells about her visit to London with the Estlins and names the Abolitionists she met there; J. M. McKim, G. Thompson, William and Ellen Craft, W. W. Brown, etc. "The papers will tell you of the 'Exeter Hall' meeting & the 'Stowe Soiree' and your practiced judgment will enable you to detect much not discovered by the public eye." Opinion is divided as to how much co-operation can be expected from the British & Foreign Anti-Slavery Society. Discusses the English attitude toward Slavery. The English "do not like to be disturbed in any of the existing pleasant relations." "...Mr. Estlin has had a paralytic s[illegible] depriving him of the power of motion in his right hand [illegible] "Mrs. Follen has had repeated

To Miss Weston «Caroline Weston?»

«Upper Clapton, London» Writes at length about contributors and contributions to the box for the Bazaar, mentioning especially the valuable engravings of Mr. Thomas Agnew. Requests that publicity in newspapers be given these engravings. Dr. Massie's "Crime & Curse of America" should be given out gratis rather than sold. The writer does not like Lord Brougham's exculpation of American slavery for the reason that England forced it on America. "Were it not for the unconquerable repugnance the English have to work with men who seem to glory in their infidelity, yr society wd carry all before it in this country." Elaborates on this theme.

Thinks the Fugitive Slave Law makes any kind of Anti-Slavery effort valuable. "How is Mr. Estlin?" Says her mother and sister have been sick.

«Camberwell New Road» The writer has been ill with a "severe nervous derangement." The printing of the conference proceedings has been delayed by the Xmas holidays. The writer is astonished that any doubt should be expressed "respecting George Thompson's speech on the motion of Mr. «Francis» Bishop ... Mr. Thompson did assuredly do full justice to the American Society ..." Thinks it would have been wiser if Mr. Bishop had abstained from presenting his motion. The printed resolution, which Mr. Bishop says he has, was private. The writer believes in following a course which will "allow old differences to heal themselves." P.
